

Jev's confidence versus its actual mistakes

Native confidence and selected-answer probability are different outputs.

A curve further left means lower scores. Separation shows whether the score helps rank mistakes.

A native confidence of 0.9 does not itself mean a 90% chance of being right. No fitted calibration was used.